Terra Madre Day, December 10

di: Redazione

9 december 2016

Terra Madre Day is Slow Food's annual day to promote the diversity of food traditions and production, and show how our network is using its creativity and knowledge to express our love for the planet and defend the future for the next generations. Since 2009, each year on Slow Food's anniversary, December 10, food communities and Slow Food convivia all around the world celebrate local eating, agricultural biodiversity and sustainable food production. Celebrations take shape with hundreds of events ranging from collective meals, fundraisers, community festivals, protests, workshops for children, excursions to producers, and much more. It's our way of demonstrating diversity and Slow Food's philosophy of good, clean and fair food to communities, the media and decision makers.

This year's Terra Madre Day calls special attention to Slow Food's first international fundraising campaign Love the Earth, Defend the Future recently launched to help collect the much-needed funds for Slow Food to continue its activities independently as a non-profit organization and keep its role as the protector of biodiversity.

For this reason, Terra Madre Day 2016 will be an excellent opportunity to discuss the relevance of biodiversity to build a better future, and spread the word through our extensive network of global supporters!
